Kraft Cheese Company Closes Hope Factory

The Kraft Cheese company closed its Hope cheese making plant last week and machinery will be moved to another site soon, the Hope Chamber of Commerce are nounced.

An effort by the Chamber of Commerce to keep the plant in Hope revealed it had been operating under difficult conditions for the past two years:

The plant, to come out, needed to handle between 15,000 and 20,000 gallons of milk each day and since the oil development in the Midway area and Southwestern Proving ground milk production has fallen far below this figure, it was stated.

E. S. Alexander, manager of the local plant, is being transferred to Carlisle, Arkansas.

The Chambe rof Commerce received the following letter from A. J. Riddle, general manager of the southwest division, of the company with headquarters at Denison, Texas:

"We too, regret the necessity of closing the Hope factory, but in view of the present conditions it was not advisable to continue making cheese at Hope,'

British Defeat 2 Attacks by Axis in Libya

Cairo —(P)— British guns and anks were reported Wednesday to have beaten off two Axis attacks at Sidi Rezegh and Acroma as Field Marshall Rommel sought to storm Tobruk before the vital supplies newly landed at the port under cover of British and American planes could be put inlo the fight.

Commentators said the position s substantially unchanged with the British holding a semi-circular defense position west, south and southeast of the port and the Germans smashing steadily at that line with tanks and artillery.

Observers said for the moment the Germans were in the favorable positions having superiority in the number of tanks and antitank guns. Three weeks of intensive fighting were said to have depleated the strength of U. S.-built "General Grant" tanks which the British had at the outset thus forcing the British to fall back on older type reserve tanks described as no match for the Mark Fours which Rommel's forces have thrown into the action. These sources expressed the belief that supplies landed at Tobruk might include necessary weapons to enable counter attacks and perhaps regain damaged but repairable tanks left behind in withdrawing from the Knightsbridge area and their Ain El Gazala-Bir Hacacim line. (The Germans command asserted Wednesday that the attempts of the British troops cut off west of Acroma to break through have been fustrated by Axis forces in the Libyan desert.)

The British announced Tuesday that their troops around Ain El Gazala which is west of Acroma had been withdrawn successfully.

This rapid industrial growth has made a sharp imprint on civilian life. Hundreds of articles no longer can be made for civilian use and more stringent restrictions are in prospect.

Despite what has been accom plished the government is under constant criticism that it has not done enough. Canadians are united in determination for victory. They are not united on how it is to attained—and the noisiest and most consistent objection to governmental policy has been over how the nation's manpower is to be used. The conservatives, official op-

The other opposition parties, the New Democracy and Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, are not opposed to that but call for conscription of material things and wealth at the same time.

But French Canada is opposed to forcing men to fight abroad. Last month's plebiscite, by which the government sought—and cob fained - release from non-conscription pledges of the past, gave new emphasis to that stand.

War Wardrobe More Useful

MARGUERITE YOUNG EA Service Staff Correspondent

w York-The wartime week-O en wardrobe will not travel so mult as last year's did-but it will go orther considering the distance sefulness. It will parade on city sidewalks as well as along contry roads.

Settings for vacations and outings are hosen, now, according to the number of gallons of gas away from homethey are. And looning dally, the possibility of restricted railroid travel. The same factors will telermine the number of little gd takes this summer and the number of weekends she stays in town. Fravel and sports clothes are desigled accordingly.

The oistanding new trend is: mix and watch for double duty, anywhere outdoors. The traveling suit is ackable and its incket looks right with slacks. The most casual country blouse is well and rlade-right for a tailored

Town-and-Country Appeal

This fashlon-mixing clothes for town and clothes for country—is even more important than was the recent mode of mingled all-town, or mingled all-country duds.

In fact, stores are now featuring above all other relaxation outfits the weekend wardrobe composed of as many 'separates" as you please each of which goes with at least two others. Inchets, tailored skirts, shirts, slacks, shorts, and sports skirts are included. These must be sold separately under the WPB

Fabrics used in these clothes are chiefly cottons and rayons. Cotton appears in endless variety of strong solid color and checked, striped, and figured patterns. Rayon comes up in ever-increasing diversity of color, design, and texture. There are rayon shantungs, linens, broadcloths, failles, homespuns, surahs, gabardines and other twill weaves, and acetate rayon Jerseys.

All of which facilitates ensemblng your own costumes, of all new garments and of old and new garments. You can match or mix the same color of different textures, such as a yellow linen jacket with twill slacks of the same color. Or ou can wear same texture in different hues - same jacket with green calico skirt. Or two parts of the same color but different texture and design—say, the twill slacks again, with a splashy print blouse.

New Turn on Vacations

By NEA Service

New York-There will be vacaions this year, but few "vacations is usual." John Q. Public and famly are going to have to cut a new ecreational pattern or remain in neir own back yard.

Approximately 60,000,000 Amercans will form the nation's vaca ion caravan this year. The rubber shortage and gasoline rationing will sadly deplete the motorized units of this army. In addition, the war ias swept cruise ships from the

Transportation Big Problem

But the vacation spirit hasn't dulled. According to the United States Travel Bureau, war's iension and the fact that money is flowing freely have made people vacation-minded than in former years.

Of last year's $7,000,000,000 vacation bill, some $400,000,000 went into foreign travel. This year practically all that money will remain in the Inited States or go to Canada or

Latin America. An informal survey of travel agencies shows that thousands of Americans are planning to spend their traditional "two weeks off with pay" hiking, river-cruising, bieyeling and even pitching hay down on the farm. Many sub-draft college students are heading farm-wards, to replace former haymakers now fighting the Axis. Travel facilities will be John Q. Public's first consideration this year. As most travel will be by lrain, John Q. asks "Will I be permitted to travel? What about reservations?" 'Undoubtedly, Americans will requently have to say 'After you, says George A. Kelly, rice-president of the Fullman Co. transported during all of 1941, "See America First" Year

Obviously, troop transportation plus the additional seasonal civilian demands will make extraordinary demands on railway facilities and equipment. Vacationists can help ease the strain, says Kelly, by consulting local passenger agents so as to avoid peak days of travel and by making plans flexible enough to permit taking a later train, even a day later, if extraordinary wartime traffic blanks out their first choice. A number of resorts are planning to have horses and buggies on hand for the use of guests who come without cars. Many travel agencies feature bicycle tours. At the close of business in her cafe recently, Mrs. Smith stuffed the money—all paper bills—in a paper bag and carried it home. The next morning while cleaning house she stuffed another paper bag with waste paper and refuse, and took both bags to the store.

As she greeted customers she dropped one of the sacks into the trash can and it wasn't until the trash had been carted away and burned that the wrong bag-the one filled with waste-was emptied into the cash register.

The ashes were carefully retrieved and sent to the U.S. Treasury Department in the hope that experts might be able to identify the bills' serial numbers from the

Glider Training in Denver

Deriver-A Denver aviation group has started a glider training program it hopes will spread to every college and high school in the na

"If the war continues for an extended period gliding is the safest and soundest method of training pilots in great numbers," says Eugene M. Ardelt, chief instructor of a gliding school recently founded at Denver Uniersity.

"If the war ends unexpectedly there still will be a great need for pilots due to the tremendous expansion that war has wrought n aviation." At Denver University men students are offered courses in both gliding and in glider construcion. Instruction in glider building is offered women in the hope will help train them in mechanics and whet their interest n gliding.

Ardelt, who toured Europe just before the war's outbreak, cites Germany's glide r program as an example of the importance of such training for youth.

"They trained 150,000 glider pilots in Germany under the guise of a sports program," says Ardelt "After two years of training, a German boy could take over and fly one of Germany's big bombers with only one-half hour of instruction."

Ardelt, who for years has sponsored a Denver gliding club, says gliding accidents are so rare they are a negligible factor in pilot raining. In Europe the rate was about one serious accident in 150,000 flights.

They are too old for this activity, usually, in high school and they turn to other hobbies such as photography and woodworking and they may never think again of aviation,

"If all high schools offered a gliding course, the boys naturally could turn to that activity at the age between model building and their late teens or early twenties, which is now considered early enough for aviation training." Ardelt says early glider training is far less expensive than pilot training because glider ships cost less to build. In addition they require a very small amount of stratgeic metals as they may be constructed almost entirely

With such crops as vetch where many immature seed are harvested, heat ing is very likely unless the seed is allowed to cure before being stored, he warned.

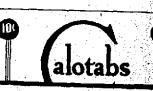

To cure seed properly for stor age, the county agent recommended that it be spread in a thin layer under a shed or in a wellventilated room, and examined daily for evidences of heating it heating is noticed, the entire lot should be turned, he said.

After drying, the seed should be cleaned and stored either in bags or in bins. Before the seed is planted or offered for sale, a representative sample should be sent to the Seed analyst of the State Plant Board at Fayetteville for

If Your Mind Inclines to Mischief, Take Good Look at Tucker Farm

MAIN DINING ROOM

Pictures and story reproduced from the Pine Bluff (Ark.) Commercial by special arrangement.

Pine Bluff, Ark. — On Friday, June 5, promptly at sunrise, the heavily barred door to the death house cell block swung open at Tucker prison farm, and Ben Adams started his last walk to the rear of the building, where an ante-room houses the ominous-looking chair shown on this page. A few minutes later Adams paid the supreme penalty for murder. Several charges (2.250 volts of electricity ended the life of a man who had spent 27 of his 47 years of life in prison.

Adams was convicted of slaying a liquor store manager at $\Lambda ugusta,\ \Lambda rkansas,\ during\ a\ hold-up.$

There was nothing spectacular about the career of Ben Adams. He was just one of a long procession of men who have walked into this little ante-room to take his seat in the hottest place in Arkansas.

The death house, electric chair, and the power generating plant are the most spectacular phases of the prison farm at Tucker, but by no means the most important from any angle.

A man has an opportunity not only to gain freedom by good behavior and diligent work, but to achieve "promotions" in the way of being trusted by prison officials. A man sentenced to the state penitentiary is sentenced " to hard labor." What he does after he arrives there . . the manner in which he conducts himself, determines the kind of sentence he serves.

In other words life in prison is based on the merit system, and hope of freedom, or hope of commutation is denied no man willing to work for it.

The electrocutioner, who is a skilled electrician, put an end to the career of Ben Adams by lifting the handle on the death-house switch-board as shown in the picture on this page. But that act is merely the climax to a lot of preparations gone on before.

The required amount of electricity... any amount less than 2250 volts would literally fry a man... is generated by two large motors, a picture of one shown on this page. These two motors are steam-driven, and the boillers are fired on Thursday noon preceding the electrocution on Friday morning.

These two motors have a historical background. They are fifty years old, and were used at one time to supply electricity to four state institutions, being originally installed in the old state capitol building at Markham. Only four of this type were ever manufactured.

The other large switch-board is installed in the power house where the required electricity for the electrocution is generated. The operator of the power house, when the fateful hour arrives, throws the 2250 volts of electricity to the switch-board in the death house. There the executioner takes over and controls the current that flows through the body of the doomed man.

Contrary to common belief, the doomed man is not burned. The very act of sending the 2250 volts into his body is in reality a "shortage" of electricity which has the same effect as if a person were hit over the head with a sledge-hammer, yet without causing a concussion.

It takes more to kill a frail person than it does a husky one, and about one ampere more to kill a negro man than a white man

The death-house has four cell blocks surrounded by a runway. Once a man enters a cell block, he never leaves it until put to death or granted a reprieve. Some men, now serving life terms, whose death sentences were commuted, have had the experience of escaping the chair by a few hours.

The doomed man is permitted to order anything he might wish for supper, his last meal on earth . . . anything within reason. They usually order a big, fancy meal and then give it to a death celimate as a farewell gesture.

Convicts are employed at Tucker and Cummins in many useful occupations. They make shoes, repair shoes, make automobile tags, can all the vegetables grown on the farms, raise and tend chickens, cows and hogs. Tucker farm now has 1,100 White Leghorn chickens, producing more than 600 eggs daily, which gives each prisoner two eggs per day.

"Swede" Gaaham, who installed the machinery for making automobile tags for the state, recommended this week for elemency, is shown standing at the press of one of the tag-making machines. Approximately 618,000 tags were made last year at the farm before materials gave out. They were originally made out of aluminum, then steel, but the need for these materials put an end to the tag plant for the duration at least. Graham also operates the power house which generates the electricity for the electric chair. The capacity of the automobile tag press is 700 per hour.

Other scenes are a part of the main stockade, where the men sleep, and part of the main dining room. The men are fed plain, wholesome food and plenty of it, all grown on the prison farms. For supper the day these pictures were taken the men were served sweet potatoes, combread, milk, spaghetti, Macaroni, cabbage, radishes, and onions. For breakfast they are fed two eggs, bacon, cereal, bread and coffee. Each man is required to make his own bed, and must stand inspection. The sleeping quarters are spotless, the floors being scrubbed daily. The stockade is ventilated by a cross section breeze, and cooled by electric fans.

Much criticism has been heard of the prison parole or trusty system. No doubt it is faulty and subject to abuse. But it is the only practical system for the operation of penitentiary farms, where the state is not financially able to employ paid guards.

There will be many, too, willing to challenge the paid guard system as being any better than the trusty system.

The practice of permitting a man to "earn" his way out or to a belter job at least keeps alive the hopes of these men.
